One night, Mel finds the badly-injured Shuu and takes care of him at her house. Mel knows that Shuu has been doing a dangerous job in order to pay the little sister's doctor bills. Her heart is swayed by Shuu, whose spirit is so different from Melina's. But she can't get off her feelings for Natsumi. Increasingly worried about Melina, whose arrival Shuu has come and passed, Mel goes to London alone. Somewhere else, Natsumi is waiting for Mel. Natsumi... But Mel still can't seem to get off her feelings for him.

Around that time, the first time Natsumi and Mel are obliged to fight. In order to put the feelings in order, Natsumi tries to work and travel to London.

Obata's Incoherent Talk Corner

Hello.
I'm the master, Obata.
How are you?

Thank you for picking up
volume 3 of Armitage!

And so, it's the first volume
I feel happier if you enjoyed it even just a little. Sorry if you didn't enjoy it at all. ~
Is this okay?

Today, again, this space will be incoherent gossip, but since it is gossip... Please go ahead and skip it.

Regarding the series
becoming a bestseller...

Really for me, I adjusted the manuscript quite a bit. But I left the series themselves alone.

Actually, this is the only time I've considered raising content. What's dealt in this story, there were a lot of things I forgot to write...
But maybe that would be considered too much, or even perverse of me.

If I asked readers: "Did he offend?" And when I don't have that much energy... I completely give up.

I think I'll take the energy I do have and put it toward my next work.

Our dear "Kinsler" has a lot of me in it. I really like the mood of this work. I was especially happy that I was able to challenge myself with the manga series. ♪

In presenting the characters' mentalities, I had a kind of "leave it open to interpretation" mentality, so much so that maybe I was taking advantage of the reader.

Still, there were people who read directly, so I was very happy. Thank you! ♪

Sometimes there were few letters from readers that were so full of curiosity that I wonder if the personality is what, and it was very interesting to read them.

(to be continued)

COME ON, IT'S "THINK" TIME! SHE WAS RECENTLY THE #2 NEWCOMER FOR OWN SCENARIO. SHOULDN'T I REMEMBER ABOUT HER.

Now then, here is the "Five Lectures," no longer in volume 1 and 2, and it'll be unacceptable if I make a mistake on a single lecture. After the beginner and intermediate lectures, I think the natural flow would be advanced, but as it was played, I can't call myself advanced.

I can't do the advanced lecture!

Can you hear people saying that? But if I go ahead and talk a little, I think that is music, taking exact steps and required skills aren't as important as the art! Umm... Of course if you become a pro, skills are important too. But of course, heart is first! That sounds concerted, but heart is something that people who have it can just convey. I wonder how many times I'm going to say "heart!"

...Love music. I think I'll always love music as a hobby :P

A number of young people have started the aim after saying that I'm happy. Please enjoy it. :D

I WOULDN'T

About the other concert:

This made nostalgia work over me. As for this story, sorry to those who have no interest in what music.

In real life, it seems the prices are pretty different (and they're different in different areas). I wrote it the way it was when I was actively playing. (In my club too, the target was to scrape from horrible music.)

In volume 2, I wrote about songs I like, but I didn't mention any unrelated songs, so I'll write a little about them too. I really like a song we played one year for our concert, "Invincible" by the Weibullies.

When I was writing about the concert here, I listened to UEM's wind channel and heard the song, "Hi, this song. How could I have forgotten about such a good song?" I was sad and cried.

(To be continued)

*The "Invincible" by the Weibullies was composed by Johnson Education Book.

YOU WON'T BE ABLE TO SHOW YOUR FACE MAGNIFICENTLY.

YOU UNDERSTAND, BOY?

IF YOU'RE ALWAYS BEHAVING SO BADLY...

HE— NOW.

I'VE GOT NO BUSINESS HERE, BUT I DECIDED TO DROP BY.

HEY! JUST FINISHED THE INTERVIEW.

WHAT'S GOING ON? IT'S BARE FOR YOU TO DROP BY HERE.

Continued (4)

"Inevitable" is an emotional, moving song. Those of you who play wind instruments should definitely listen to it! Also, I like "Jupiter, the Bringer of Jolly" in "The Flinders" suite. That's the same, right?

The "Inevitable" song I finally mentioned in volume 1 was a staple we played for every term concert. We played various ones in the jazz band too, but I liked the staple we played, "In the mood." Doesn't it mean like there are a lot of "ifs"?

And the others weren't songs. Set piece "Inevitable."

First place I wanted to write to "Jupiter" or something, but if I decided I wanted to specify the songs, I'd end up saying, "Such and such piece after they start the performance is weird" or "The second transition part needs to be played here!" It was obvious that I would focus too much on things that have nothing to do with the story. So I didn't specify them.

P.S. By the way, I have a sister who's two years older than me, and she played the clarinet, so in my first year of middle school, we had clarinet together. We had clarinet activities together, and even without tuning, our sounds matched perfectly. "As expected of siblings," is what we heard.

So, the materials from the brass band really helped me out—Thanks, it

With a personal computer, you can research lots of things, and it's so handy. There's also lots of information you don't need to look at, so I don't look at things I don't need or things that are boring. I have fun using it, it

★ About the future: ★

First, in the future, I plan to publish in something other than ELITE. If I think of material that makes me say, "I want to publish this in ELITE!" then I'd still like to draw for ELITE, but I don't know what that yet. I'll just go with the flow. At any rate, my right now priority is figuring out "What do I want to write?" rather than "Where will I write?" Writing what I want to write, where I want to write it: I'm not sure if I can get away with this kind of freedom these days... ♪

I told my editor about these feelings, and he understood, so I'm moving peacefully. So don't worry about me! I'll stagger around a bit. 25 #

I had the writing-outside-of-Kibon is a big adventure for me.

I'm in the corner of Kibon, and it smells like a bar! (Or maybe it smells like room drama... "Laugh") Drawing things onto me the first, and I like it, so I did it more and now honestly, since a long time ago, I've been writing "to challenge myself with something other than Kibon"... that's complicated.

Anyway. As for the stories I write for adult-oriented magazines, if you like this, please don't forget "100" for me and mine.

Well, for me to write in Kibon again this year, even if you forget, that's okay! I'm always planning a second debut.

I still have a mountain of books. I'll try doing my best at what I can. For now, that's how it is. Yes.

It's happy if we meet again.

Well then well then, thank you for reading. ♪ Those who want to give their thoughts on Andoria ⑩, send them here.

Good work on the Andante serialization!

During production, Obana-sensei was really worrying about whether the tofu in the supermarket (the one Mei was poking in volume 1) should be in the package or not, and while she was busy she left me to do the texts on some MEAT, and somehow I feel like I learned a valuable lesson aside from just drawing manga. Ahaha. Please always keep being so wonderfully funny and keep writing fun manga! ☺

三浦衣良

What progress for a meat time.

It made my heart pound to read the manuscript that reached around when Melon was still this way.

In doing (singing and words and such), there is often the idea of "someone who will remain in memory" (for example, there's a rule that a person who left an important promise behind ("let's get married," etc.) all become someone who won't be coming home again, so in the story, when they started making the CD I was thinking, "She's done for!" Aside from the people whose illustrations were shown here, I was saved by many others as well. ~w

They are all busy people, and if there are more than three assistants at once, I just start giving directions and get frustrated. So usually, I have two or three people take shifts when it's convenient for them. Usually about half a day. Toward the end, I was having four people come over.

*And when we safely finished,
we had a decoupling party. (Laugh)*

Come to think of it, before this serialization, my thought of "From now on, I'll try to draw it all myself" seems like a dream. ~w

It really is impossible without help.

No way, no way.

Obana's story "Great White Synthesis" was "good work" in the 20th Shounen Magazine Awards, and she debuted in Shounen Jump - Shounen Jump in 1979.

Starting with Shounen Jump, she published mostly in Shounen Jump magazines. Her main place is "Kodomo no Omocha." She won the 22nd Kodomo magazine award in the shounen category in 1991 for the same work.

After suffering carpal tunnel inflammation, it's hard for her to even hold a pen, but even now she still works energetically by wrapping her pens to make them easier to hold.

Married. Her husband is Mitsuo Saji, the composer who directed the music in the "Kodomo no Omocha" anime. She had a daughter in 2005.

According to her blog, her dream came true when "Kodomo no Omocha" became a hit, and her creative passion went out. Still, she released a new work, "Kodomo."
